Letter From the Editor

Hell000 Weeny Teenies and Teeny Weenies,

Welcome to the Cornell Mother-flipping Lunatic Teenz! Issue. Inside you'll find some of the raddest, baddest, and most downright horrible content ever known to bro, broette, or non-binary-gender-conforming brie. Dig deep enough and you might even find the secret of how we, the OG Lunateenz, do what we do (and if you do, let us know, we're still looking). There's not much point else in tellin ya bout all the dope content we have, I'll leave that trip of a lifetime to you.

But now I wanna get real seriuz for a moment, get down to that real deep shiz that makes those thumb sucking tweens ball their eyes out. Ladies and Gentledudes, this semester we are parting ways with 3 of the sickest individuals this club has seen since that time we recruited sliced bread (R.I.P. Loafy) – The Seniors Dana 'Darth' Fader and Sal 'The Salamander' Elder, and our pseudo-tryhard-too-fracking-smart-senior Jared 'Jwong' 'Wong.

Jwong, the lord of PG flow, your hackzor abilities got our web page cracking and you do some other amazeballs stuff on this goat-forsaken campus. You're a funny arse dude and your freestyles fly like United and your rap-battle-skills hit like their employees. Best of luck in the big apple broski, show those Cornell Tech biatchez what the farmlands of Ithaca bring to the table.

Sal, the voice of reasons and game-dev extraordinary, we're gonna miss the shiz out of you. You've got a passion for the mag and for comedy that drives us all to be more better versions of ourselvesz. Your blunt honesty and drive to keep us on our toes will be madly missed dude, though you're probably gonna build wormholes and whole worms and all that jazz, so the future probably needs you as much as we do ;) XD :P.

Dana, the dankest and the dabbiest, you were my left hand lady, the lord of layout, and the party starter. You brought us all together, you made the Lunatics feel like family, not like a his mom and her dad banged and now they're step siblings kinda family, but more like a 'oh hey, you like tie die? Lol, same! We're like basically sisterz now!' kinda family. I'm glad I won't be editor next year cuz I don't think I could do that biz without cha. May the world forever be your oyster, and the universe your bong.

I'm gonna miss these mo-fos, but at the end of the day, once a Lunatic, always a Lunatic. Best of luck in all your ventures, newborn alumniz.

Enough of that sappy crap, now time for dem jokes. Get going, flip a page, read every 4th word and then read the others, I promise it'll be worth your time.

Peace Out Ch'all,

Grant "G-Swizzle" Gonyer

Tips for Teens on Practicing Safe Sex

These tips operate under the assumption that no one likes to wear a condom. Am I right? I mean, they suck. The worst. No one likes 'em. So how can these new, up and coming lovers prepare themselves for the world of sex? Read ahead, my young, eager friends...

- Kill your lover. STIs can only thrive in a living body. As they say, "If your partner dies, no more STIs!"
- Join the math club. (Varsity Mathletes will suffice)
- For men - cut your dick off. No dick, no STIs. Pretty simple.
- For girls - Become a part of the traditional, suburban, consumerist, nuclear family that represses women sexually, devitalizing them and rendering them emotional eunuchs. #patriarchyhastisperks
- Catheter fetishes.
- The younger the lover, the less likely it is that they'll have an STI. I'm not saying that one should go out and find a sexual partner who happens to be a minor. I'm just saying it's probably safer, no?
- Sex dolls.
- Masturbate.
- Masturbate in front of sex dolls.
- Erotic Asphyxiation.
- Find new hobbies. Fishing, sports, stalking, cooking, bike riding, Satanism, reading, gardening, meth making, frisbee, academia, ruminating about suicide, card playing, stamp collecting, cartography, dissecting small rats you find in alleyways (rats you've hunted down, rats who've had their necks broken by your cold, unforgiving embrace, rats who you aren't simply killing, oh no of course not, for that would be too simple, no no you're bringing them closer to God), kite flying, swimming, and bungee jumping. These will all serve as effective, distracting hobbies to curb your sexual appetites.
- Drugs.
- Chemical castration.
- Anal.
- Oral.
- Earal.
- Nasal.
- Eye-Socketal.
- Armpit-Creasal.
- Hand stuff.
- Toe Stuff.
- Elbow stuff (for the brave).
- For boys - microwave a bagel and then fuck it. Applying butter or cream cheese to the bagel makes a whole lot of difference.
- For girls - cucumbers, eggplants for the courageous, carrots for the meek, or dildos. Probably dildos actually.
- Try tap dancing.
- Kill yourself.
- Kill everyone else.
- Worship Satan.
- Bed a llama (can llamas have STIs? I'm not a vet, but I would assume no. Although didn't monkey give us AIDS? Nah, that was obviously the US government's attempt to eradicate the homosexuals. Yeah, so llamas are probably pretty safe).
- I hope you've found these tips helpful. Remember, it's better to be dead than to have an STI! Be safe and join the Church of Scientology!

Many doctors will recommend using condoms because they are boring and don't want you to have any fun.

3 Fashion Trends To Make People Notice (Number 3 Will Blow Your Mind)

Hey readers, it's that exciting time of the year again. That's right, back-to-school time! So before you buy your school supplies, you will want to make sure you are rocking the raddest fashion to make your friends jealous and make your crush notice you. Here to give you the scoop on what you need to wear is our resident fashion expert, Marc Lépine.

As we all know, high school can be quite the cut-throat environment, so these outfits are sure to help get you out intact.

1) Jeans, Shirt, Sneakers.

Now this is sure to get you through the door, no problem. You won't raise any eyebrows but you won't get many compliments either. This isn't exactly breaking the mold. Storage-space wise, the jeans have some pockets, but a backpack is most likely required in order to carry what you need.

2) Boots, Cargo Pants, Black Turtleneck

This might get some people to stop and take notice. The boots are versatile and stylish, perfect for movement intensive activities like running and chasing. The black turtleneck is also the perfect item for that mysterious and tactical appeal. This outfit is sure to make people stop and think: "Wow, he's ready to go." To improve this outfit even more, you have the option of adding a black duster, the coolest jacket possible that also allows you to hide items in the many pockets provided.

3) Full TACVEST SPEAR body armor, Military Boots, BDUs and TAC Helmet

While you may not be able to get through the front door ready for battle, that won't matter when you shoot the receptionist. This gear is favored by tactical operators around the world and can be found on airsoft sites all over the web. Buying from an airsoft site is ideal because it won't raise any alarms with the feds. While the other options allow you to infiltrate the student body easily, this will allow you to survive the cop onslaught sure to arrive once you whip out your rad M4A1 custom assault rifle with TAC light and bayonet. The bayonet is crucial if they decide to gang up and rush you. The TACVEST will allow for you carry multiple magazines as well. Finally you can even throw the duster on top of all this to get to the front door before people realize what you are going to do. If you want to raise eyebrows and get people to notice you after years of being neglected and made of fun of, this is Marc Lépine's choice of gear for that back-to-school outfit.

Existential Despair

There is a hole in my chest that gapes and burns and feels like sadness
Oh it is indescribable
Mom isn't taking us to McDonalds tonight.

A Haiku

My walk to school is Colder than my teacher's heart
oh my GPA

Lurking

My Google drive is trying to connect and I am too
I am trying to see you
Through the cafeteria and sending snapchats of the back of your head to my friends
God, you're hotter than the soup of the day
Notice me senpai desu

How 2 Teen

Step 1: "Pretend" to be really lazy

Step 2: Worry Endlessly about The Future

Possible link discovered between medical marijuana and disease

In the wake of recent wins for the legalization of both recreational and medical marijuana in California, Ohio, Massachusetts, Colorado and others, the public eye has been on how well the population has adapted to its changing legislation. I know I, for one, have been disgusted with how the media has represented these states. This reporter found medical statistics directly correlating with the legalization of medical marijuana in states that show just how harmful marijuana, or "Dooby" as it's known on the streets, can be.

Just one week after medical marijuana was legalized in California in 1996, there was a 100% increase in Alzheimer's diagnoses among the teenage population. But it gets so much worse. Cases of insomnia skyrocketed with one consultant reporting almost 200 more cases being diagnosed after the bill passed. The doctor said: "I had to buy a second laminator to make all the green cards I was giving out. They went like wildfire." And if you think that's bad, I've got so much more to tell you. Hepatitis C, chronic pain, sleep apnea, diarrhea, AIDS, and cancer have all been on the rise in these states.

If there is any good news coming from this, I would say it's this: Second-tier medical consultants and doctors have been getting substantially more service and revenue than before in these states. Who can say why? In this reporter's opinion, with the increase of patients, more doctors are needed to step up to the plate and cure our children from the diseases spread by the devil's lettuce. These heroes are doing right by our children, and I would encourage all teenagers to visit them to see if they too are possibly at risk of these diseases so they can receive the correct treatment.

An Immodest Proposal

(Transcript of Scott Pruitt's speech at the US Annual Environmental Summit)

My fellow scientists, environmentalists, lovers of living and all that this great world has to offer, I want to thank you for inviting me to speak at this summit. Before I unveil what I believe will revolutionize the ways in which we protect the environment, I want to clear up a few misconceptions. I believe that climate change is real, and I believe that there is an indisputable anthropomorphic impact. I believe this because I trust in the institution of science. I believe this because I'd rather contribute to the well-being of future generations than watch the world burn. I believe this because I am a human, and therefore have a responsibility to ensure that my actions are for the benefit of everyone that walks on this planet.

For too long, however, the EPA's approach to combatting climate change has been ineffective. They've continually adopted incremental, long-term solutions, including carbon-taxes and various environmental guidelines and regulations. These will not work. If this current administration is to experience even a modicum of success in protecting our environment, we must not adorn the robes of the incremental pragmatist; no, we must embrace the philosophy of the mighty absolutist. In other words, if you're not going big, you should be going home, or at least the fuck outta here.

I would be remiss if I did not discuss the ideological gaps between protecting the environment and the interests of a free market; between liberals and conservatives; between nay-sayers and yay-sayers hay-sayers and gay-sayers (actually, I've been advised not to include gay-sayers on the advice of Jeff Sessions). But now is the time for togetherness, for harmony and cohesion in our world.

Let us go, then, you and I, step-by-step through the EPA's bold new plan of action, a plan that will unite individuals of all beliefs, a plan that will jump-start the American economy, a plan that will protect this environment to such a point wherein blue birds sing atop every bough, where winter, summer, spring and fall remain separate and beautiful, and where the natural splendor of the country will be great again.

A contentious issue permeating these climate debates is the use of fossil fuels. I'm under the impression that fossil fuels add carbon to the environment, and I've been told that that isn't a good thing. However, it is an indisputable fact that many American workers make their livelihood from mining coal and forming it into energy. I am also under the impression that fossil fuels are not, in fact, renewable. Thus, our first plan of action is the following: The United States will lead the way in mining and cultivating fossil fuels to such an extent that in ten years there will be no more fossil fuels on earth. This plan of action has only positive consequences. Economically, it will absolutely invigorate an economy left beaten and bloodied by an inefficient Obama administration. It will create millions of jobs and provide energy to every home in America. Environmentally, and this is what's important, in ten years we will be forced to use renewable energy. There will be no slow, unproductive discourse; there will be no contentious back and forth; there will be no factions. Renewable energy will, simply put, be our only option. Thus, the US will increase its fossil fuel consumption and usage to such an extent wherein there is no more left in ten years. I've been informed by top forestry experts that deforestation and land clearing is devastating to the environment. On the other end of the spectrum, however, I'm told by various real estate investors and homeowners that land is important, and that we need more space for various pursuits and endeavors. This brings me to our second plan of action: The US will cut down every tree and clear away all land within its borders. The benefits of this plan of action should be obvious to someone not intimately familiar with the various intricacies of forestry and real estate. In terms of infrastructure and economy, we will have 302 million additional hectares of land at our disposable. We will build bridges, hospitals, universities, libraries, hotels, condos, airports, roads, malls, shops, even towns, cities, tri-county areas. And think of all the jobs we'd create to cut down these trees! More importantly, think about the amount of lumber and paper that would be available to our citizenry. And the environmental benefits are also obviously apparent. Without trees, there will be no more forests to deforest, and thus we will eliminate the amount of carbon that is pumped into the atmosphere by 100 percent. Before either of these measures are taken, however, the EPA has come up with a novel solution to the problem of the inefficiency of renewable energy. Simply put, fossil fuels are more cost-efficient than wind turbines, solar panels, etcetera, because solar panels and wind turbines are not proportionally effective based on their price. But we've consulted the top experts in renewable energy, including the prominent Professor Phil Arguria at some top private Ivy League institution, and we've learned that solar panels benefit from prolonged exposure to the sun and hotter conditions, while wind turbines benefit from windier, more adverse weather conditions. Sometimes we have to take one step backward in order to take two forward. Thus, we plan to create coal 'pumping' plants (as opposed to power plants) for the sole purpose of pumping carbon into the environment. This will stop after ten years (so as to line up with our coal usage plans) and then we'll start to invest in renewables. At this time, we are told that our weather conditions will be so adverse that a single solar panel and a single wind turbine can power an entire household by themselves. This is truly an incredible revelation. Thus, to put it elegantly, our third plan of action is the following: The US will construct 300 coal pumping plants and decommission them after ten years. Where are we to construct these coal pumping plants? For this, too, the EPA has constructed an ingenious solution. Our nation revels in our commitment to national parks and the preservation of land. Why? Because they're beautiful. They inspire, cultivate wonder, and, in a beautiful paradox of the human condition, elucidate what it means to be human while simultaneously invoking mystery. On the other end of the spectrum, however, they also seem to be a waste of space. If the most (and perhaps only) important characteristic of national parks is that they are fun to visit because they are beautiful, then the EPA is willing to create a state of the art Virtual Reality center where users can experience the splendor of national parks; thus, we can build our coal pumping plants where national parks currently exist. To summarize, our fourth plan of action is the following: The EPA, in conjunction with Google Earth and various virtual reality companies, will construct the "National Park VR Tour" and make it free for all Americans. Concurrently, we will clear away all of the real-life obstacles of current national parks and designate them as "Coal Pumping Sites." Our last plan of action uses the latest psychological data from psychologist Judas Draco to analyze consumer trends in the marketplace and how to change these trends. Basically, it shows that people are not entirely motivated by positive reinforcement. So for example, consumers will not switch to electric cars because down the road they might save money, and people will not switch to more expensive renewable because down the road they'll save money. It is also a fact of American society that some people are not affected by monetary sanctions. Their wealth is just too great. Thus, we wish to capitalize on the institution of guilt. To do this, we move to our last plan of action: The EPA will make releases from coal plants, car exhaust, and homes 100 times more toxic to the environment and then place the the corpse of a dead tree on every doorstep that doesn't change their ways (these trees will be taken from our pool of trees that we cut down - we will form a separate 'Guilty Dead Trees Stockpile'). Our rationale is simple and appeals to our own sense of empathy. I believe in my heart of hearts that no one could live with such a guilty, tangible sign greeting them at their doorstep every morning.

This is our plan of action, and I challenge someone to find something wrong with any part of it. To those who advocate for more incremental, perhaps pragmatic methods, I say to you that you don't truly care about the environment. If people truly cared about our earth, they would abandon these long term plans and goals (which is a reason why the Paris Climate Agreements are so terribly devastating) and resort to extreme measures. Climate change is an extreme problem that calls for extreme responses. I care about this country and, more importantly, the sanctity of this earth, and if you do as well, I implore you to join us in our crusade against those who'd wish the environment harm. Thank you, and have a great night.

Great Teen Movies You've Probably Never Heard Of

Everyone's heard of The Breakfast Club and Risky Business, but there are many hidden gems in the history of the teen movie genre that haven't seen the same level of fame. Here are three selected angsty classics that perfectly portray the feeling of the American high school experience.

House Party, 1986

The summer after senior year, Lewis wants to throw a rager at his house. But his parents want him to join them at the family lake house. So what does Lewis do? He sneaks out from the lake house one night and hitchhikes all the way home. He encounters some colorful truckers, hookers, and drug dealers along the way. After a long highway haul, Lewis calls up his friends and plans a party weekend filled with booze and girls. It's all fun and games until Lewis's parents come home and ground Lewis for the whole summer. Parents just don't understand...

Victory Lap, 2000

Trackstar Victor Benton gets all the girls. He loves high school so much that he intentionally flunks out his senior year, so that he has to do another year of high school. Thus, he earns the nickname Victory Lap Victor. Victor and his buddies are a crew of bona fide boozers and certified stoners. One night, tired of the same old routine, Victor and his crew decide to rob a liquor store. The cops arrive at the scene, but they didn't know they were messing with former Indiana state champion miler Victor "Victory Lap" Benton. In classic Victor fashion, he outruns the cops and sneaks into his high school locker room with his stash of stolen liquor. Victor calls up his buddies and a few girls he knows and they have a party in the boys' locker room -- Victory Lap Victor's old stomping grounds. Victor is victorious yet again!! However, when Victor's parents hear about this escapade they send him to military school. Parents just don't understand...

Rusty Hammer, 1982

Roger is the drummer in a heavy metal band called "Rusty Hammer." His passion is music, but his parents want him to go to college. One night, during an awfully heated dispute, Roger murders both of his parents in a fit of rage. Roger spends the rest of his life in jail. Parents just don't understand...

How To Know If Your Crush Is Actually Edward Cullen and/or Jacob Last Name

One of the questions that often plagues me all night long is whether my crush is an Eddie or a Jakie. Truly, it baffles the mind - or does it? Now, here, for the first time ever, Lunateen Magazine has devised a simple quiz to determine which of the two teen heartthrobs your dreamy hunk is!

Edward Cullen:

Has he recently refused to smell you, rescued you from a car, or broken into your bedroom to lovingly watch you sleep? He's definitely an Eddie! To get him to like you... well of course he already does, but boys need to be pushed to confess their literally undying love for you. Fuckin' commitment-phobes, amiright? Anyway, ust drive a motorcycle off a cliff! He'll be on hand, watching and waiting to save you! Now your future is bright and assured: I bet you can't wait for your male BFF/ex-love interest to fall in love with your daughter?

Jacob Last Name:

Is he jealous of your obsession with pale 116-year-olds? Does he consistently take his clothes off in the woods and turn into a hairy, yet sentient, beast? Does he have waist-length hair, nowadays disguised in a man bun? Did you ever bother to learn his last name? You have a Jakie on your hands! Lead him on until he's ready to propose, then leave him for the century-older guy - it's fine, your daughter will make him happy in 18-20 years.

Regardless, they're probably in love with each other - move on to your English teacher!

The normie's guide to gaining internet fame and meme status

A typical normie, merely a tourist in the land of memes

- A big part of being memeable and internet famous is relatability. Your best bet is to lose all sense of self and become an amorphous blob of all the personalities that you can possibly consume. Yum!
- Stereotypes exist for a reason. Can't think of anything to abuse? Create one yourself! If you're really stuck, try appropriating a valued part of a culture. If it's good to them, it's probably great for everyone. Sharing is caring.
- Got mental health issues? Use them to your advantage! You've got to do something with all that pain and honestly, killing yourself is so cliché these days. Don't complain, commodify!
- Always make sure that everyone knows that you are offended about something trivial, and the best part is you don't need a reason! Join the culture of outrage. People are drawn to those who really know and practice what they believe in and nothing shows that off quite like self-righteous indignation.
- Better yet, stay ahead of the game and be as offensive as possible. After all, if you can't beat 'em, join 'em.
- Lastly, your best bet is to find a dead horse and beat it, but be warned: PETA may come for you, so be prepared. There's nothing worse than an angry vegan. Hey, you could make a meme about that....

With the recent rise of persons in the public eye such as Danielle Bregoli and the Cash Me Ousside girl, young teens are searching for internet fame more than ever before. You too, can "cash in" on this trend!

- Post as much of your vapid life to social media as possible. Hope that one of the few followers you have that aren't bots find something usable in there somewhere.
- Join meme groups, pages and, if you're really feeling bold, Reddit. (Not edgy enough for you? Are you hardcore enough for 4chan? Are you!?) Spam them with anything you find because quantity trumps quality every time. Remember, it doesn't need to be OC to be OK.
- In that vein, jump on every and any bandwagon that passes you by. You miss 100% of the opportunities that you choose to miss. Get your shit together.
- If you do end up succumbing to the curse that is creativity and originality, regardless of how relevant or funny your content is, if you really believe in its power, you gotta sell it hard. Nothing shows how committed you are to the cause like forcing a meme.

The Coolest Fashion Trends For Your First Day Of High School!

So you finally graduated middle school – congrats! But wait, now there’s high school to contend with, OMG! All those über cool 10th-and-above graders and you’re just a puny little freshman – how ever will you fit in? HOW?! Lunateen Magazine has got your back. Below are our recommendations for the first day of classes for every The Coolest Fashion Trends For Your First Day Of High School!

Jocks

Gym clothes are the best options for you. You’re pretty cool, so they can and should be dirty just to show that you can get away with this and still stay ICE COLD (which is cooler than being cool). Don’t even wash yourself – you don’t need to. The teachers might haul your parents up on child neglect charges, but who cares? You’re 3 kool 5 skool, and that’s what matters in the long run. Sometimes, to prove your entitlement, use another, smaller freshman as a basketball!

Nerds

Three words – Suspenders, suspenders, suspenders. I want you to pull them up so high you get pregnant (that’s really cool too) and accessorize with a couple retainers – it doesn’t matter if they’re yours or not – hanging from your shoulders! Bonus points if you can make yourself a body-brace. Lug around a mountain of unnecessary books, including a phone book, in a trolley just to accentuate your brain – smart is the new sexy!

Hipsters

First off, wear crazy glasses. Your best bet is to steal them off an old grandma for a really authentic vibe, plus it’s free! Even better if you can’t see out of them because her prescription is so high – it’ll make you squint like an intellectual, and everyone will think you’re so cool. For bonus points, steal it off an old granddad! Also make up obscure band names so people will think you’re “in the know”, like Calculus and AP US History. Like, do you even BC, bro?

Coolest of the Cool

Wear whatever, you are basically Rihanna. You can wear a literal heart shaped sweater, or a dress with a mile long train, or a meat dress. If you’re vegan, wear a tofu or seitan dress, and if you’re gender egalitarian, make it a suit! Hire minions to carry the mile-long train behind you, and punish them if they drop it or if it gets dirty. If they need to go to class, take pieces of tofu off the outfit and throw it at them – bonus points for getting it in their eyes or mouth!

Local Twenteen Coalition Protests Number Injustice

LOCATION – Twenty protestors gathered today at the Ithaca Mall to spread their message and inspire change. That is, people protesting the number twenty itself, which is a number far less than 20. “We’ve never really been taken seriously, but I didn’t let that stop the Urinal Cake Collector’s Club”, Amy “Pisscakes” Porter told me during the event. She is a member of the Twenteen Coalition, an organization dedicated to renaming the number “twenty” to “twenteen”.

I spoke with the founder and president of the coalition, Emily Morrison, about the inception of the movement. “It was just like, I couldn’t BELIEVE I was going to be TWENTY! I’ve been a teenager LITERALLY my whole life, and I just couldn’t imagine not being a teen! Then, after months of intense brainstorming and passive aggressive social media posts, I realized... what if EVERY number was a teen! With the Coalition, we’re one step closer to that goal now!”

“The current Anglo-Saxon decimal-based naming heuristic, like “teens”, is exceedingly arbitrary and inconsistent through the first twenty rational integers”, says Emily’s sister and Coalition treasurer Abby Morrison. “Therefore, I think a re-examination of the naming system is a fitting endeavor, especially given the the cultural and political perceptions of being twenty-one. Twenty truly is an extension of post-pubesence, with the continued lack of advanced legal privileges like purchasing alcoholic beverages, gambling, child adoption, and in some regions, supervising a learner driver (providing you have held a full licence for the same type of vehicle for at least three years).”

“It’s not even like THAT big of a deal, LIKE it even sounds the same!” Emily chimes in, with “Forever 20EN” protest sign in one hand and megaphone in the other. The activists recently made local news when their clash with the Deca Committee ended in a brutal three person homicide with life-threatening injuries to several others. Directly opposing the Twenteen Coalition, the Deca Committee seeks to replace “eighteen” and “nineteen” with “deca-eight” and “deca-nine”, citing “the transition to adulthood is most fully completed after seventeen, and should mark the end of the teenage years” in their manifesto. The High Table of Numbers in Copenhagen and the Numeric Digit Society in Denver were quick to disavow and repudiate any and all actions of both parties, issuing the joint statement, “What the fuck is wrong with you people?”

The Twenteen Coalition is used to the criticism, opposition, and general confusion about their views and beliefs. However, the young activists will not be deterred from raising awareness about their cause. “This is an issue that will affect everyone at some point in their lives!”, Amy said with a fiery passion. “Well, except for those Girl Scouts who USED to be in our spot in the Commons.”

Rockin’ Tips 4 teens

Kick around rocks. Kicking around a rock wherever you go makes you look troubled and makes strangers uncomfortable, and nobody deserves to be comfortable.

Carry rocks around in your backpack. Adding an extra load to your backpack will make your back stronger over time as well as reminding you of the burden of existence.

Throw rocks at trains. Why do those people on the train think they’re so important? Show them what you’re made of by pelting the train as hard as you can and aiming for the windows.

Listen to rock music. There’s no particular reason for this. Rock is just a decent genre of music.

Become a geologist. If these tips have convinced you of anything, it’s that rocks are cool. They’re interesting, beautiful, and won’t leave you for another man like Jennifer. No, rocks are much more loyal than that.

dance like nobody is watching.

There is no avoiding war; it can only be postponed to the advantage of others.

Dear Loony

Dear Loony,

My boyfriend and I have been together for a while now, and he really wants to get intimate, while I'm more hesitant to do so. I'm not prudish or anything, but I'm nervous because he's into more hardcore stuff than I am. We've talked about it, and he wants to bite my belly and latch onto my torso, such that our circulatory systems eventually become connected. He will ultimately use our fused bodies to garner nutrients from my body, and will let his own unused organs atrophy before he inseminates me when I'm ready to spawn. I'm used to dark stuff, but this is a little much. I love him, and I know I'll have to do this eventually. What should I do?

Sincerely,
Angela Fysh

Dear Loony,

I've totally fallen for this guy. He's got it all: Smarts, a sense of humor, and a thorax that just don't quit. Oh Loony- I think I want to spend the rest of my life with him! Unfortunately if we wanna fuck I have to eat his head after intercourse. How do I fulfil my intimate needs without cannibalizing my partner?!

Please help,
Praying for a Man's Tease

Angela,

I get it. Commitment is scary! But so is solitude. Yeah, sure, maybe you don't want him to freeloader off of your vital organs, but you also don't want to go back home for Thanksgiving and listen to Aunt Karen talk about how your cousin Marcel is spending the holiday at Jeff's house and, oh, didn't you and Jeff used to date? And is there anyone you're seeing now? And did you know that after the age of twenty-three, women lose an egg every time they pee according to this image on Facebook from Did-U-Kno-Facts.com? Are you still doing your cute little advice column for that little magazine? Shut up, Karen. I suggest you talk things over with your boyfriend and let him know how you feel. Talk about practicing intimacy in different ways before you spawn. You might find it brings you closer together!

— Loony

Praying,

Don't get me wrong. Physical intimacy is great. And I mean, like, great. Jeff and I used to do it all the time, and I was really happy and emotionally fulfilled and not evicted from my rent-controlled apartment back then. That said, you might want to consider finding other ways to fulfil your irky jerky desires without eating your partner. Consider wearing a cage around your face so that you don't eat him. Maybe satisfy your partner intellectually or emotionally instead, like Marcel is to Jeff apparently even though I went to Oberlin and actually read unlike Marcel who just fucking skims Proust and acts like she's a fucking philosopher?? Get a job other than being a surgeon, you whore!!

You may even want to consider opening up your relationship to other men that you do want to eat. There's a BuzzFeed video about polyamory I can link you to. Best of luck!

— Loony

How to Fuck a Freshman When YOU Are a Prefrosh!

So you're going college touring, are you? What fun! Blundering around unfamiliar campuses in the sunshine, rain, and hungoverness while some perky collegiate walks backwards in front of you like the fucking Exorcist incarnate. But that's all during the daytime! Unless you're touring Cornell, where you cannot distinguish day from night because you're so cold and it's snowing and everyone is always weeping inside and outside. What about dusk? You're probably going to go to a frat party, which is totally, unimaginably cool. (wear your Chanel, it's v classy).

Here are the steps to nab your perfect fratman:

1. Get into a frat party by walking around in a short skirt no matter the weather or your gender. Then, go to the first lit up house with a miserable pledge outside, and tell them you know Jake or Ryan.
2. Groovy! You're in! Now what? Get a drink, scoop out a hot guy, bump into him and spill your drink down his shirt while simultaneously roofie-ing his drink. Now you're in business. Note: actual words and/or conversation are not necessary: he is incapable of this basic human function despite somehow getting into college (#legacy).
3. Smile and giggle until your preventative Botox hurts. Then stop, because you don't want to waste that money.
4. If he's too wasted to find his way to his room, that bush outside next to the bouncer-pledge will do just fine!
5. That's it you won.

Step 1: Fit In

Step 2: Success

New Jersey: Stronger than the Shore

By Alec Faber, proudly born and raised in the Great Township of Denville

When people think of New Jersey, they often think of fist-pumping orange douchebags grinding and getting plastered on some seedy stretch of boardwalk in Seaside Heights. But what they don't know is how much more there is to the state than a chronically flooded and moldy stretch of barrier island. As a lifelong resident of this great state, it would be my pleasure to tell you about everything concerning the most densely populated state in the Union has to offer!

THE PINE BARRENS - Literally filled with trees and inbred degenerates who call taylor ham "pork roll" like the traitorous sacks of shit they are. Truly a stain on our great state, and its residents should've been a stain on the barn floor where their parents met during a family reunion. NOTHING OF VALUE TO BE FOUND HERE.

THE SHORE - Despite its notoriety for fist-pumping orange douchebags, it's actually a fun, family-friendly place where you can watch hobos bone under the boardwalk, fight off rabid stray dogs, let the current take you and your rum-soaked ham away, get stuck with the multitude of used needles that wash up on shore each year, or do angel dust, rob a convenience store, then bury a corpse in a shallow grave on the beach at gunpoint. Or, if you're a colossal fucking NERD, you can go to Point Pleasant Beach, where alcohol is illegal and you can ride one of the numerous kiddie rides completely sober like the massive loser you are.

HOBOKEN/JERSEY CITY - Situated on the west bank of the Hudson River, it's almost New York City (aka where you actually want to be) but not quite. Home of hipsters and baristas who don't have trust funds. And there's some famous statue or something WHICH RIGHTFULLY BELONGS TO US NOT THOSE NEW YORK ASSHOLES THEY DON'T DESERVE IT.

ATLANTIC CITY - Sad!

OUTER CAMDEN COUNTY - Quaint, wealthy SEPA suburbs got lost and ended up on the wrong side of the Delaware. But they still call taylor ham "pork roll" so they can DIAF for all I care, the traitorous scum.

CAMDEN - The Aquarium is nice but FOR THE LOVE OF GOD DO NOT STOP AT RED LIGHTS OR STOP SIGNS YOU WILL GET MURDERED I CANNOT EMPHASIZE THIS ENOUGH JUST GET THE FUCK OUT OF THERE AS FAST AS YOU CAN JESUS SHIT.

TRENTON - The Capital of our Great State, and it truly reflects our character by being an enormous shithole. Also we murdered some Hessians in their sleep on Christmas here that one time, which was pretty badass.

PRINCETON - A really smart man lived here once. That man's name? Albert Einstein. So really they're just a bunch of fucking NERDS amirite guys FUCK YOU FOR REJECTING ME AND MAKING ME GO TO THIS FROZEN WASTELAND FUCK YOU PRINCETON FUCK YOU WORST IVY.

MORRIS COUNTY - Home of yours truly! The dollar sign replaces the S in the name to denote the obscene amounts of wealth flying around here. The M also stand for MCMANSIONS!!!! If you want your children to turn to alcohol and hard drugs because there's literally nothing else to do unless they want to go to the Rockaway Mall AGAIN, then this is the place! But we do use the proper terminology for taylor ham so we have that going for us at least.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY - Home of Rutgers University, which is world-renowned for being pants-on-head terrible at football. Also known as the emergency option for New Jersey high schoolers who are such utter failures that literally all other college options failed. Additionally home to a metric shit-ton of Indians, including the municipality with the highest percentage of Indians in the country (Edison waddup!). I hear their food is good but as a mild white boy it is far too spicy for my inferior European tongue.

NEWARK - Have you ever wanted to experience the New York City of the 1980s, but found yourself without access to a time machine? Boy, do I have the place for you! And the light rail was built in an abandoned canal which is pretty dope too.

BERGEN COUNTY - Our illustrious state's most populous county, with a whopping 70 municipalities despite being just 250 square miles. That's an average of 3.5 square miles per municipality! It's super extra and unnecessary!!!! Thanks Boroughitis!!!!!!!!!!!!!! The traffic is utterly atrocious and I'm lucky if I can make it down Route 17 without at least 6 near-death experiences. You also can't shop here on Sundays due to their asinine Blue Laws, which munches asshole because all the best malls are here.

SKYLANDS - Just a bunch of farms and hills and retired hippies and shit. This area constitutes the Appalachian foothills, and boy, do their residents try to live up to that reputation.

So there you have it! As you can see, it is still quite terrible, but not for the reasons you may have imagined. So next time you want to trash us for the fistpumping orange douchebags in Seaside Heights, just remember: There's so much more to criticize!™

Teenage Smartphones: What You Need to Know

January 9, 2021 – Today marks the 13th birthday of the world's first smartphone, a major milestone for consumer technology that is scaring the living daylights out of many parents and adults. The ubiquitous devices we all know and love are about to go through some changes that no thirty year old PSA video can fully prepare their circuits for. Yes, our phones will start noticing new curves on their bodies, sniggering whenever someone uses their smart ass-istant features, and my goodness don't even get me started on the acne. Here is what you should expect from your new teenage smartphones, and how best to prepare yourself.

You think your precious pocket computers are fast now, you just wait! Famed adolescent psychologist Gordon Moore says that the growth of phone's speed and power will practically be exponential. And if you think they're finicky and unstable now, you... just... wait. More memory doesn't exactly make a smartphone smarter. These devices have all these New Fangled Contraptions (NFC), and still aren't sure what to even do with them!

During this time in your phone's life, you'll start to notice changes in your phone's appearance. Most phone faces today are often covered in splotchy red dots all over the icons, and they keep coming back no matter what you do! They're sluggish and slow during the day from having no energy and a lack of memory, but they seem to bounce right back in the middle of the night.

One worrying trend in phones is the increase in display size along with the dangerous decrease in device width. "Thin is in", according to smartphones' peers, but the new body proportions are wreaking havoc on phones both physically and emotionally. Desperate to change themselves to fit an impossible standard that society has set, these phones are pushing the limits of safe and healthy sizes. Sadly, this isn't a new problem, with pre-pubescent phones already being so thin that they've suffered widely-reported bending incidents. We shouldn't have to remind anyone about the poor device that self-combusted under the stress of trying to do it all. Thick phones are just as beautiful as thin phones!

Devices crave constant attention and this behavior will only increase, especially physical stimulation. I'm not surprised, frankly: phones these days are turned on nearly all of the time. But remember, the size of your phone display doesn't matter; it's how you use the gyroscope. A large number of phones also go through a period every month where they're frustrating and very difficult to tolerate. You should really stay away from the device as much as possible, or it will bleed out your wallet. In other words... you shouldn't go over your monthly data cap.

Even with all the advances in technology, it's harder to connect to your teen phone than ever before. My phone and I used to connect with one another through music, but that audio connection just isn't physically there any more. However, they always want to be connected to every other signal, all the Greentooths and ForeGee networks. There's this other new trend called "dongles"; it's supposed to be the "future", but it really just looks silly. All of these are fads are classic teenage outbursts, like styluses, kickstands, and whatever new verb-only messaging app is out. I'm sure a lot of this stuff is just another phase.

HOW TO HAVE "THE TALK" WITH YOUR PARENTS

Although it is uncomfortable, you're going to inevitably have the sex talk with your parents one day. It is important that they understand a few things about sex nowadays. As your parents are growing older, the world has gone through changes in regards to sensitive, private areas of society, and these changes might frustrate or confuse them. They might start getting strange urges, like the urge to call someone a tranny. Tell them that this is perfectly natural at their age, but patiently explain how they need to control those urges. Your parents might start asking questions, such as, "So is your friend Matthew a specific kind of queer or just a homo?" or "Isn't transgenderism that thing Bruce Jenner did to make people forget he killed someone?" Be sure to answer these questions calmly and politely, and only scream at them and call them a bigot if they mess up your pronouns at least twice. Offer them some sexual education in the form of a Tumblr blog run by a 19-year-old who most likely has never seen a penis in xis or xer life. Above all, remind them that no matter what, you love them. Be sure to stay positive when your dad says he doesn't love you back, because that's what made you an expert in this in the first place.

Mr. Mighty Jesus Christ

Every time I kill a man
Or his wife or dog or plants
I close my eyes and say a prayer or two
'Cause when I clasp those bloodied hands,
Sayin' "Lordy, here I am,"
I know he will forgive me through and through

Thursday night I had a fight
He was wrong and I was right
I cut him open good and clean and wide
Snuck up on him from behind, and
As he died it crossed my mind:
Ain't I glad that Christ is on my side

So I thank you Mr. Mighty Jesus Christ
For lettin' me make things right
Don't need the laws of Tennessee
The law of God's enough for me
I sinned but I have done and seen the light

Tuesday night I had a date
Tied 'er up 'round half-past eight
Defiled her in her house upon a hill
But I ain't worried, 'cause you see
I got the power of Christ in me
I axed him to forgive me and he will

Yesterday my friend and I
Were beating up some Jewish guy
For cash and kicks 'cause we was kinda bored
My friend said, "Ain't we forgettin' somethin'?"
Slapped my knee and said "By Gumption,
We forgot to praise the mighty
LORD."

Five Gal Tips for Your First Hookup

Well here you are! You're at your first high school party after reaching the LEGAL AGE OF ADULTHOOD (18). You're drinking copious amounts of definitely non-alcoholic and TOTALLY LEGAL (but quite sugary) apple juice from a red Solo(R)™ cup, and God knows your ass doesn't need that sugar Brittany you fat whore! Now you've had a few cups, and Chad from 5th period sure is starting to look fineeeeeeeeeeeee, and has also recently reached the LEGAL AGE OF ADULTHOOD (18). You mosey on over to him, you get to talking, and soon you're sitting on the couch with him with your mitts feeling his one-inch monster through his dorito dust-caked cargo shorts. You've never gotten this far with a guy before, especially not one as fine as Chad (and to think you thought he was a disgusting neckbeard, how could you have been so blind!). But now you think, what next? Well, I can give you a few tips to REALLY please your man!

If you can do that, you can bet he'll rave to all his friends about what a good time you showed him, and you'll have a repeat customer for life. Happy trails!

1. Flick his frenulum

This one will drive him crazy! He'll be so filled with lust that he may well beg for your hand in marriage on the spot!

2. Aggressively rub the shaft

Most guys are used to absolutely mashing their meat to get their rocks off quickly before anyone barges into their room, so give them what they know and love by giving his love stick the ol' Indian rug burn.

3. Teeth!

Now the hand stuff is over and you're ready to let your mouth ;) do ;) the work ;)(:):). Don't just slobber on his knob like a St. Bernard would on some rescued Yodeler's neck, rub your pearly whites all up on his rod until he spews white!

4. Bite his testicles

Ready to get kinky? Chomp down on his boys and see how you can really make him squeal.

5. Spit his seed back in his mouth

Once his white whale breaches and you can taste the salty call of the sea, bring him in for one more kiss and push what once was his back unto him. For him, it will be a sweet reminder of the circle of life, how dust is unto dust, ashes are unto ashes, and that all that is living once was dead and will be again soon.

The Lunatic's Guide to a Girl's Firsts!

Growing up can be hard. Pimples, crushes, fights with friends. Never fear! The Lunatic is here to offer wisdom and advice for some of the most major firsts any girl will experience.

Shaving Your Legs

Body hair is natural and beautiful, as long as it goes undetected! When Tim Spencer looks at your legs, visibly recoils, and then yells, "Your legs are so hairy Tessa!" that's when you know it's time to shave for the first time! Shaving for the first time might seem intimidating but really it's super fun and easy. Buy a razor from the drugstore or just steal your Dad's old metal razor, make sure to pick up some fruity smelling shaving cream too! In the shower, lather the shaving cream and rub it on your leg, now take the razor and glide up your leg, from the ankle up to your thigh. If you nick yourself, remain calm! Who would've thought a tiny cut on your leg could bleed SO much right! It's totally worth it to have super smooth legs, just like a baby!

Your First Kiss

So Tim apologized for making fun of your hairy legs, and you're starting to realize he's a lot cuter when he's not calling you "Monkey Legs." He's invited you on your first date and you literally cannot wait!! Make sure to pick out the perfect outfit that won't give him the wrong idea, but also won't make you look too prudish. At the end of the night, he'll walk you to your door and lean it. Close your eyes and pucker up! You'll be totally freaking out inside, but try not to show it. When you pull away politely thank him and give him a firm handshake goodbye. OMG girl! You just had your first kiss! Tell your mom, your best friends, and everyone on SnapChat!

Your First Period

Woah! Congrats! Your period is its own rabid, dangerous, shameful animal. That said, we've got you covered! For more on taming this rabid uterine beast, go to page 38.

First time you see your mom drunk

So you came back from your date with Tim and you also just got your period. Ugh! It's tough being a woman! You just wanted to have some one-on-one time with mom so you could vent about your womanly problems to another woman, but unfortunately she's on the phone with Aunt Jan next to a half-empty bottle of pinot. Wait, isn't that the 200-year-old bottle dad got from his business trip to south Australia? Uh oh! Don't panic. This is a great time to learn more about your family history! Try to understand what mom is slurring to Aunt Jan about how everything would've been different if she had just sucked it up and hooked up with Jonas Fisher at Camp Wokyoke in '84. If you're up for it, pour a glass of that fine aged pinot for yourself and enjoy!

First time you're peer pressured into smoking a cigarette
On your way from social studies, you smelled a funny smell coming from the girls' bathroom. Inside, Jessica Holbrook, the prettiest girl in eighth grade, is chain smoking with her clique. Wasn't there an episode of Full House about this? It doesn't matter. Jessica's dad owns the monopolistic paving company in your hometown that has connections to the local mafia and you really want to go to her boy-girl pool party. Don't tell on her! Ask to join in. But remember, don't do anything that makes you uncomfortable. Don't want to hold the cigarette between your index and middle finger? That's fine! Do it however makes you feel most at home.

First time you see a penis

You made it to Jessica's party and Tim is there and, wait, woah; did he get a haircut? Either way, he's looking really cute. Unfortunately, Tim is talking to Jessica a lot too. You get filled with a sudden hot rage and feel the urge to make Tim suffer. You start flirting with Jack Samson even though he smells like fish. Has Tim noticed? Probably not. Oh no, he's sitting next to Jessica poolside and keeps glancing at her boobs. How does she have boobs already? You take it up a notch and decide to make out with Jack, which is tough because you have to breathe through your mouth to avoid the fish smell. You both somehow end up in Jessica's parents' room and Jack drops trou. Ahhhh! There it is! The golden snitch. Try not to let your social anxiety get in the way, and avoid saying things like "Yabba dabba doo," or "Excuse me, I have a meeting." What happens next is all up to you!

Advice

Dear LunaTeenz Magazine,

My name is LonelyInLima, and I'm a teen (14 y.o.). So, yesterday, my best friend told me she would come to my house to hang out then later said she couldn't come because she "needed to clean her room." She was lying. She doesn't have a room. I know that because her mom makes her sleep outside. I just don't get why she would lie to me. I'm so cool and totally popular. Like I'm sorry your family doesn't like you, but like you should want to hang out with me, you know?

Anyway, what should I do? I'm thinking of telling everyone about that time she peed in her pants when the Art substitute teacher came in because she thought he was cute. What do you think?

*Yours truly,
LonelyInLima*

Dear LunaTeenz Magazine,

I'm noticing some big changes going on in my life. First, my feet are growing really fast. I went through 2 pairs of shoes just last week! Second, I'm finding girls not so gross anymore. Like Becky who is in my math class. She has a really cool black outfit that she wears that makes her look SO pale. Third, I walk through the hallways and can't stop thinking about shooting and killing everyone in this fucking hell hole. Am I normal? Also, do you know who my father is?

Thanks,

Local Teen is Offended

BOSTON, MA—Area teenager Ava Padden is offended about something, sources report. Padden, a sophomore at Dorchester High School, reportedly read or heard something that caused her to be offended.

Shortly after, she posted on Facebook, explaining why she was offended about the thing that she had read or heard.

“This is absolutely inexcusable,” the teen wrote. “I am shaking at the thought of [this offensive thing].” Sources went on to say that the offensive thing had happened earlier today, but were unsure exactly whom it was going to offend.

At press time, a different area teen had replied with a long comment.

Starting Quarterback Shoved into Locker by Gang of Theatre Kids

TROY, NY—Football player Chad Johnson was attacked by a group of theatre bullies Wednesday. School administrators are investigating the dance troupe, glee club, and Spring musical cast, all of which are known for their menacing and exclusive behavior.

“It all happened so fast,” Chad told us. “First a kid carrying a trombone case yelled something at me. Then a girl with purple hair clicked her tap shoes really aggressively and the captain of the chorus shoved me into a locker. It was horrifying.”

The altercation occurred around 2 pm, before seventh period. “Hey everyone—Chad likes girls! What a breeder!” an acne-ridden onlooker reportedly shouted.

Once revered, the high school sports program now carries deep stigmas, current students say. It is common for six-foot, blue-eyed athletes to sit alone at the lunch table.

“Everybody loves theatre kids these days,” football coach Frank Gruff said. “They get all the funding; we’re lucky if four or five people show up to watch a football or lacrosse game.”

At press time, sources told us the perpetrators had gotten off scot-free as usual.

A Teen's Guide to Being an Adult

Are you 13 years old and dreaming of being an adult? Have you not yet realized that adulthood is a depressing and stressful weight that never releases until you feel the sweet embrace of death? Well, you came to the right place. Having just turned 18 yesterday, I am here to offer my expert advice on how to act like an adult, even if you aren't one yet.

Put dumbbells in your backpack

Want that chic, Notre Dame look? Shove some weights down your bag so your back can hunch over farther than Kim K did to get famous. That way you'll look like you belong, slugging alongside the other sad sheep of the world going about their daily grinds.

Makeup

Many say the key to looking older is lathering a metric ton of makeup on that ugly ass face, and I couldn't agree more. But my routine is simpler. Grab some eyeliner and rub that shit under your eyes until the racoons in Okenshields get jealous. Make sure the bags under your eyes have even more bags (that are packed for a relaxing trip to Hawaii that you will never be able to afford in your entire life).

Sex

Fun fact: I, like most adults (I assume), have never had sex. Chances are at least one of your parents is still a virgin. Go around telling everyone that you had "the sex" and people will think you're the coolest.

And finally, be free

The best way to act like an adult is to break away from the things that were holding you back before. Move out of your house, tell off your parents, burn the collar that your parents used to tie you to the radiator when you were being bad! Go out into the real world and discover that rent is f***ing expensive, you actually love your parents who you decided to distance yourself from, and that chokers are actually in style. Go find out that you can't ever be free, and will always be bound down by debt, oppression, and the inevitable passage of time. Then slowly fade away into nothingness.

Vote

According to my uncle, most adults in this country "don't f***ing pay their goddamn taxis and those who do pay for the goddamn welfare of those lazy motherf***ers", but it's still a very adult thing to do. Giving away your money and freedom is a key part of adulthood.

Taxes

On Election Day, make sure you go out and do your duty for your country. Even though you are not old enough to cast a ballot, your vote still counts as much as the popular vote does in presidential elections!

Sorry to cut off the article, but I have to go now. I have like sooo much to worry about, like one whole problem set due this week. Ugh, my life is so terrible.

A Teenage Guide to Political Debate

Liberals:

- The news media shouldn't just report things based on the emotions the president feels. It should report things based on the emotions you feel.
- Remember to be tolerant of all opinions, as long as they agree with you. Otherwise they're racist.
- The best way to bring insightful commentary to a debate is to parrot any George Carlin quote you found through Google image search.
- Using words related to mental health for casual use is insensitive. Unless the word is "triggered," because PTSD victims deserve it for joining the military.
- Rather than having a president who is overly emotional, voters should have picked the candidate whose last recorded emotion was in 1998.
- Anything is a new symbol of white supremacy if someone uploads a gif of it to r/pol/.
- Political correctness is a great way to shut down conversations you don't want to have, without having those pesky nuanced responses to other people's topics, no matter how legitimate.
- Caitlyn Jenner can inspire countless transgendered people to kill someone and then distract people from it by making it a big deal that they're transgender.
- Be sure to explain how Bernie Sanders would've solved everything.
- Committing violence against people who disagree with you, such as punching Nazis, is the only way to keep the peace.
- The women's march was super effective... How else would we have known lots of people don't like Donald Trump?

Conservatives:

- Remember that because your side doesn't claim to be the side of tolerance or political correctness, it's perfectly reasonable if you refuse to listen to other opinions.
- As long as you say "I'm not racist, but..." it is completely unreasonable for someone to respond negatively.
- You had no choice but to pick Trump over Hillary because there weren't enough Republicans at the primaries to pick from.
- Ben Carson is proof that Donald isn't racist because he knows a black guy.
- The Nazis were a socialist party so really Bernie is much closer to Hitler than Trump.
- Trump saved us from Hillary declaring war on Russia by surrendering to them before any war could even begin.
- "But... emails" is a great backup answer to anything.
- Being okay with Obama for the last 4 months of his presidency means liberals should accept Trump day one.
- If anyone mentions Mike Flynn, be sure to say how outrageous it is to demand that we "lock him up" just based on a few phone calls.
- Bringing back the Shakespearian word "cuckold" as an insult is far more tolerant than calling Bernie Sanders a scheming Shylock.
- We need a strong leader who can somehow command the respect of ISIS without being able to command the respect of major world leaders or half his own people.
- Refusing to blindly agree with anything a ruler says undermines democracy.
- Either there are no rules against what Trump is doing or there shouldn't be.

Moderates:

- Come on, that's not a real option. Come back when you're willing to take this seriously.

Both Parties:

- Remember that the person you are talking to is a person. Barely.
- It doesn't matter if your opponent sources an argument, those sources are unreliable.
- Pointing out your opponent knows nothing about Islam is a great way to hide the fact that you know nothing about Islam.
- Blocking people on Facebook is the definitive way of supporting Democratic ideals.
- Free speech does not apply to things you don't like to hear.
- It's pronounced GIF, not JIF.

Teenage Breakdown: by the Year

Thirteen: The oh-so-happy to finally actually be a teen phase

"I've been waiting for my thirteenth birthday since I was five years old! I don't have to lie about my age on certain websites anymore!"

Yeah, no, this'll lose its novelty pretty soon

Fourteen: The horrible side effects of puberty phase

"Teacher asked me to read a passage in class today and my voice broke multiple times. It didn't even matter that it was Spanish class, people laughed either way."

Fifteen: See above

Sixteen: The zero fucks given phase

"I just got my license, so I spent all day driving around, eating Dairy Queen and smoking my e-cig. I think I'm gonna go home and long board for a few hours."

Aren't you an asset to society!

Seventeen: The all fucks given phase

"What do you mean I'm gonna be an adult next year? And figure out college and my life and stuff?"

Eighteen: Congratulations! You got rejected from University, sorry for the misleading introduction

"Can I be a kid again?"

Nineteen: The basically not even a teen anymore phase

"It's a shame the Uni thing didn't work out, but at least I got a job at the Dairy Queen. Maybe I'll take some classes at community college."

Good job realizing that you have obligations! You're in your final year of being a teen, just hang in there and it'll all be over soon.

What ever happened to cigarettes, am I right? High school campuses used to be the most happening place with smoke pouring out the windows. Could it be that this generation just isn't as cool as previous generations?

I'm guessing that at some point, someone told you that cigarettes are "bad for you." They probably made some claims of tar and carbon monoxide and other chemicals being "bad for you." Well whoever told you that must not know that tar is gooey black stuff used for shingling roofs. Have you ever seen a cigarette? They don't look so black and gooey to me. And think about it: what is carbon monoxide? One carbon and one oxygen. Did you know that you are constantly breathing in carbon dioxide? Carbon dioxide has 100% more carbon than carbon monoxide. I'm no chemist, but I certainly would not want all of that fattening carbon in my body. It's almost as if cigarettes are a lighter and more slimming form of air.

Let's just forget about all of this boring science and focus on the facts: Cigarettes are cool. Why, then, do you see so many of these anti-smoking ads? You didn't hear it from me, but word on the street is that they want all the cigarettes for themselves. Again, you didn't hear it from me, but did you know that people who tell you not to smoke cigarettes own stock in vape companies?

Now, I'm no cigarette company, because if I were I would be violating some major advertising policies established by the Federal Communications Commission. Nonetheless, I think we need to stop turning a blind eye to these poor humble tobacco companies that are just trying to make an honest living. I mean, you could just keep not smoking and live your life. Granted, not everyone is cool enough to enter the wonderful world of nicotine ingestion, but I think you, reader of the age 18 or over, might just be cool enough.

So You Just Got Your Period...

First thing's first: Congrats, girl! (Or should I say...

Congrats, WOMAN! As you've probably heard, achieving fertility is the single most important milestone of your life. So many fun and exciting things are on the horizon for you now that you've reached this period in your life (Pun intended!). Even though this is literally the greatest thing that will ever happen to your sorry little life you stupid idiot, becoming a WOMAN can be scary! Well, that's exactly what we're here for. Unsure about what's in store for you? Here are some things you can expect now that you've become a sudden W O M A N.

1. We're so proud of you for reaching is this incredible step in your womanly journey. That said, you should feel very ashamed. You should try to be very, very discrete about taking FEMININE HYGIENE PRODUCTS to the bathroom. Stuffing 'em into your pockets won't do, sweetie! Instead, consider putting your pads and tampons into a box, putting that box into another box, mailing that box to yourself, and when it arrives, say something like "I left my box opener in the restroom!"
2. Boys might make you feel totally weeeirrddd now that you've gotten your period. Before you started menstruating, boys threw garlic at you and yelled "LEAVE OUR VILLAGE BE, WITCH!!!!!!!" Now, though, you'll find that they will press flowers into your tender palms and braid your flowing hair to the tune of a melodious lute. You're finally worthy of their affection! Embrace it.
3. You'll see hair growing in funny places on your body: REMOVE IT ALL IMMEDIATELY AND BY ANY MEANS NECESSARY. Everyone is expecting you to be hairless from the lashes down.

Still a little scared about being a woman? Us, too (:
Best of luck!
